Education

2022 - 2027 (Expected)	Ph.D. in Economics, Purdue University Committee: Timothy Cason (Co-Chair), David Gill (Co-Chair), Yaroslav Rosokha, Brian Roberson Dissertation: Essays in Experimental Economics on Coordination Behavior
2022 - 2024	M.S. in Economics, Purdue University
2017 - 2020	M.S. in Agricultural Economics & Management, Peking University Thesis: A Study on Durations of Caregiver-Infant Interactions and Early Childhood Development in Rural Families
2013 - 2017	B.S. in Economics, Southwestern University of Finance and Economics

Academic Employment

Jan 2021 - Jul 2022	Senior Research Assistant, China Center for Agricultural Policy, Peking University

Research Interests

Behavioral Economics, Experimental Economics, Game Theory, Public Economics, Applied Microeconomics

Doctoral Research

Job Market Paper

1. Sustaining Coordination in a Dynamic Stag-Hunt Game
   Abstract: Many collective goals are secured only after sustained coordination, and a single failure can erase accumulated progress. In my dynamic stag-hunt game, consecutive successful coordination advances a public state toward a protection threshold; any failure resets it, and an outside shock before the threshold imposes a loss. I characterize Markov Perfect Equilibria and develop a state-dependent dynamic basin of attraction measuring how much strategic uncertainty agents can tolerate while coordination remains optimal. In an experiment varying group size and the safe payoff and eliciting choice probabilities, subjects choose the risky action more as groups approach the threshold, and coordination persists beyond it. A lower safe payoff increases coordination; smaller groups coordinate more only when the safe payoff is high. Post-failure behavior differs from initial behavior in only two of the four treatments, and in opposite directions. Individual mixing is common initially and fades with progress and experience.
